Building skills for the future

The Western Parkland City is a fast-growing centre for jobs and innovation.

With the development of the new Western Sydney International Airport and surrounding Aerotropolis, industries such as advanced manufacturing, defence and aerospace, pharmaceutical manufacturing, freight and logistics, and agribusiness are transforming.

The skills needed to fill jobs in these industries are also rapidly changing.

The New Education and Training Model (NETM) works in partnership with industry and leading education providers to deliver short courses called micro-credentials (40 hours) that allow people to quickly build the knowledge, skills, and experience employers need.

Through the NETM, residents of the Western Parkland City can turbocharge their skills and take advantage of exciting new career opportunities, right on their doorstep.
